God's Word For The Week

"What do you think? There was a man who had two sons. He went to the first and said, 'Son, go and work today in the vineyard.' "'I will not,' he answered, but later he changed his mind and went. "Then the father went to the other son and said the same thing. He answered, 'I will, sir,' but he did not go." Which of the two did what his father wanted?" "The first," they answered. Jesus said to them, "I tell you the truth, the tax collectors and the prostitutes are entering the kingdom of God ahead of you. For John came to you to show you the way of righteousness, and you did not believe him, but the tax collectors and the prostitutes did. And even after you saw this, you did not repent and believe him."

Another Dandy Design!

Are you into flower gardening? Many people are and those individuals know that plants frequently turn toward sunlight. How do plants know where the sunlight is and how does the plant turn toward the light. It seems this is due to something known as chemical design.

What is chemical design? Well, cells communicate through a language of chemical signals. It has to do with compounds such as hormones or something referred to as neurotransmitters. They act like words in telling a plant what to do. For example, in our bodies the pancreas detects the presence of food that has just been eaten, and when this happens it releases insulin, a hormone that tells the other cells in the body to remove glucose from the blood.

Just like we need ears to hear communication from someone's words cells also need something like ears. For plants these are receptor proteins located on the cell wall. They hear all of the chemical symbols coming from a variety of sources and respond to the ones designed into the plant. That is like us hearing 50 people talking to us at one time and picking out the one we really wanted to hear.

In the case of plants turning toward sunlight, it is the tips of the plants that do the "listening." These tips of plants produce auxin, which is a hormone that directs cells to grow and divide. The less sun the tips get the more auxin they produce. That means that the cells on the shady side of the plant get more auxin and their cells grow more than the sunny side of the plant. When the shady side grows more, the plant will bend toward the sunlight.

This may seem to be a simple thing for a plant to bend sunlight, but the mechanics behind this simple act demonstrates incredible planning. Each chemical in this process has been carefully designed and the operation of the receptor cells is unbelievably complex. The more complexity we see the more we should wonder at the intelligence behind it all.

Some would say that it is merely evolution and thus it just happened! However that is incorrect. Nothing ever just happens. Consider for example the device we refer to as a watch. What if someone said your watch exists through evolution. No it means there is a watch maker. Romans 1:20 teaches us that God did everything. "For since the creation of the world God's invisible qualities—his eternal power and divine nature have been —clearly seen, being understood from what has been made, so that men are without excuse"
